Pat Wolfe is a former teacher of Kindergarten through 12th grade, county office administrator, and adjunct university professor. Over the past 25 years, as an educational consultant, she has conducted workshops for thousands of administrators, teachers, boards of education and parents in schools and districts throughout the United States and in over 50 countries internationally. Her major area of expertise is the application of brain research to educational practice. Her entertaining and interactive presentation style makes learning about the brain enjoyable as well as practical. She is an award-winning author and has appeared on numerous videotape series, satellite broadcasts, radio shows, and television programs.

Contact Dr. Pat Wolfe for information, registration application and fees.

Training the Trainers Institute

Presented by Pat Wolfe, Ed. D.

“Educators are perhaps more captivated by brain research than the general public. The reason is not difficult to understand; the brain is the organ of learning but we haven’t understood how it works! Our students’ brains have been black boxes with their secrets locked inside.”

This Training the Trainers Institute helps educators unlock those secrets by translating neurological research into classroom practice.
